About the Course:

In recent years, we've seen a resurgence in Artificial Intelligence (AI), and Machine Learning (ML). Machine learning has led to some amazing results, like being able to analyze the medical images and predict diseases on-par with human experts. ML can be embedded into all sorts of different products, and it's used in many industries, like finance, online advertising, medicine, and robotics. It is a widely applicable tool that will benefit the people, working in different industries, R&D organization, etc. Further, the artificial neural network normally used for predictive modelling, adaptive control, etc., where the dataset based training enables it for self-learning and based on this next level predictions can be done from a complex and seemingly unrelated set of information. Generally, the machine learning (ML) approach is considered as the subset of the AI, and the deep learning (DL) is the subset of ML.

Major Course Contents:
